Club Holds New Year's Eve Parties

Making plans for the busy New Year's weekend, the couples group of Victor Woman's Club is holding a party Sunday night to welcome in 1962, followed by a breakfast from 2 to 4 a.m.

The New Year's Eve party will be held by Mrs. Jack Linsky and Mrs. Harry Caserman, co-hostesses, at the home of Mrs. Linsky, 20925 Victor Ave.

Following the party, couples will attend the breakfast at the home of Mrs. Lee Dawson, 20710 Tomlee Ave., where waffles and ham will be served. Co-hostesses for this group are Mrs. Dawson and Mrs. Steward Kulp.

"The Southerners," a male quartet, and "The Notes of Life," a girls' trio, will be featured at both services. Dr. Chester Allen, Bible teacher and lecturer, will deliver a message at the 7:15 p.m. service.

The challenge of the year "Reading it Thru in '62" will be delivered by the Rev. James P. Lowen, pastor. The challenge is in cooperation with a nationwide program sponsored by the National Association of Evangelicals.

Between the two services there will be a time of fellowship and refreshments will be served.

Galeras Advance to Throne Of Local Order of Amaranth

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Galera advanced to the throne of Lomita Court 61, Order of Amaranth, at Torrance Masonic Temple December 14 and initiated Mrs. T. Marren into the order.

Mrs. Galera conferred the accolade of the Amaranthine degree while Galera was in charge of ceremonies.

Mrs. Gerald Mittan stepped up to the station of associate matron and Mrs. Albert Bayes took the station of conductress. Mrs. Edward Morgan filled in as associate conductress and Morgan performed the duties of associate patron.

Dignitaries escorted and presented were Wilson O. Wade, deputy supreme royal patron of supreme council; Sture G. Lind, grand associate patron; Mrs. Wade, matron, and Bayes, royal patron, congratulated the advanced officers on their performances.

PARTICIPANTS

Cottons for Resorts Report

Free and easy—that's the mood of cotton fashions for resort, 1962, reports the National Cotton Council.

The silhouette is fluid, uncluttered and decidedly feminine with shapes which gently outline but never cling to the figure. The modified Princess, the one-piece dress with a two-piece look and the easy sheath are fashion's Big Three this season. Waistlines are on the rise in graceful Empire shapes or, at the other extreme, placed low—almost on the hip.

The skirts below are free-swinging but slender, tailored with pleats, gentle shirring or a panel which conceals deep pockets. These are seen in soft cotton knit, hopsacking, piques, and textured suiting weight cottons.

The color wheel spins full circle this year to include bright, sun-drenched solids and patterns on screened cottons, as well as a welcome renaissance of beiges, gray and navy in casual as well as evening clothes.

Among designers of daytime dresses, the leading favorite is the ensemble or costume. Dresses and jackets in solid colors or sophisticated pattern on waffle weave piques make smart fashion sense for the traveler as well as the working girl.

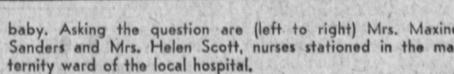

Batiste or gingham sun dresses with tiny bolero jackets can do double duty—on the patio by day and, without the jacket, on the dance floor by night.

Versatile Suits
Coats and suits echo the theme of versatile but simple elegance, and are shown this year with narrow, set-in sleeves and a silhouette which is artfully shaped to the body in front while the back swings free, often in a graceful cape line.

The cape silhouette is a trend-setting one for the season, having already become an established star in the rainwear field in poplin or twill weaves.

WHO WILL BE FIRST?—Eagerly awaiting the arrival of the first baby of the New Year, staff members of Torrance Memorial Hospital are making preparations for the New Year's

One Third Of Workers Are Women

Women are a third of the U.S. labor force, and one of every three married women works. In the last three years, the number of married women at work rose by 725,000; by 1970, the number of working women will have increased and estimated 25 percent as opposed to 15 percent for men.

"The American woman college graduate," says the January Reader's Digest, "is emerging from her home in increasing numbers to re-enter the man's world of work. Despite the reluctance of businessmen to hire her, she represents an unmistakable—and probably unstoppable—trend."

The article, "The Problem of Women Who Want to Go Back to Work," says that since World War II, women have been marrying younger and having children sooner. Children are in college or at work by the time the average mother is well into her 30's, with time on her hands.

There are obstacles of prejudice and salary discrimination, and too often, the older woman re-enters the job market hunting "an interesting job" for which she's really not qualified, the article says. Fifteen-to 20-year-old experience has little value.
